In spite of its protestations that it had come to Omaha to help Nebraska to gain statewide prohibition, the thirty-sixth annual convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance union in session at the Auditorium was not unanimous in the one aid it has been asked to give the Nebrasks organization in its efforts to attain this end.

The convention settled down to business this morning, the amendment of the constitution being the matter in hand. That every woman was looking out for technicalities that might prove more important than they seemed, was evident from the start. The first tilt came when Mrs. Frances B. Heald, president of the Nebraska organization, asked the convenmen under indictment for the murder of tion's endorsement of a resolution passed last week in the Nebraska union's annual convention, stating that while the Ne-
